3RD TRANSNATIONAL MEETING

Albano Laziale is an ancient town in Castelli Romani, firstly inhabited by Latin people, rich in myths and legends.

During the Middle Ages feuds between Roman aristocratic families made Castelli Romani the battlefield of continuous struggles to secure their power.

A must for "Grand Tour" artists, Castelli Romani still remain a great attraction for sightseeing.

The inception of "The Golden Bough" by the well-known anthropologist Sir W.Frazer gives way to an extensive research work setting the scene in the nearby .

Tourists wishing to see Rome, can't miss popping up to Albano Laziale, walking through its picturesque alleys, tasting locally farmed food, smelling freshly baked bread in the air and newly pressed wine grapes.

The Erasmus + project aims at developing new learning strategies with the use of mobile devices. The challenge is twofold: two education systems meet to make learning more attractive.

CASTRUM:

The camp was built under Emperor Septimius Severus around 202 A.D. as a headquarter for the about 6000 men of the second Legio Parthica. The rectangular plan was 435 m. long and 232 m. large and covered an area of about ten hectares. This was also fortified with square towers along the sides and round ones on the corners. Some of the towers and walls can still be seen, together with other remains of the main gates, houses and warehouses.

CELLOMAIO THERMAE

Emperor Caracalla wanted these baths to be built to restore peace with the legionaries on Albano camp whose discontent had risen after his brother Geta was murdered.

In the Middle Ages the building was used as a fortress, only later it was converted into private dwellings.
